You are here:Q: Can a wall of force be used to create an object? The Force and Its Uplift While the force can deflect projectiles and repel objects, it also can create them. In fact, both walking across a bridge and hitting an object with a rock can be seen as examples of its creation effects. Force users can bend metal, mold flesh, rearrange atoms, or simply stop a moving object in its tracks. Galak-Zyrn Quote When you engage in combat using the Force, you can bind objects and people with your mind. You can do this by using the Force to propel yourself with powers like Fear, Whirlwind, Wind, or Torrent, or by animating objects. A: I'm pretty sure it is used to create physical objects in general. Given the above quote, and the existence of the following poster (which were created by Silvious Valle, a character in the Star Wars novel series, Star Wars: The New Jedi Order), its not unreasonable to assume it is used to create physical objects. Before the events of the New Jedi Order, Palpatine's use of dark energy allowed him to create a telekinetic bond with an ancient planetary race known as the Semnas. Their planet was destroyed in an explosion caused by the emperor's technology, and only shortly after the events of the New Jedi Order, the same technology is responsible for creating a colossal single-celled organism in the Jedi Temple. I'm also pretty sure it has been used to create
